

Biocompatible Compound for immediate stanching of massive bleeding (Ariel)

Danny Baranes, Molecular Biology

Prof. Baranes and his team have developed a biocompatible compound combining calcium carbonate, citrate and polylysine which causes immediate coagulation of massive bleeding which can be implemented in the field. It has been tested in vivo on wounds of liver, heart, spleen and brain.

Contact for more information:

Tamir Levital , Director of Business Development for Life Sciences, +972-3-975-8995
